Mixed Commission for Upper Silesia

Michel Erpelding

Content type: Encyclopedia entries

Product: Max Planck Encyclopedias of International Law [MPIL]

Module: Max Planck Encyclopedia of International Procedural Law [MPEiPro]

Article last updated: November 2017

Subject(s):

Minorities — Legality and legitimacy of tribunals — Right to self-representation — Quasi-judicial bodies, procedure — Fact-finding and inquiry

Published under the direction of Hélène Ruiz Fabri, with the support of the Department of International Law and Dispute Resolution, under the auspices of the Max Planck Institute Luxembourg for Procedural Law.

1 The Upper Silesian Mixed Commission ('Mixed Commission' or 'Commission') was a quasi-judicial body instituted pursuant to the Convention between Germany and Poland relating to Upper Silesia of 15 May 1922 ('Geneva Convention' or 'GC'). The aim of the Geneva Convention, concluded for a transitional period of 15 years ending on 15 July 1937, was to alleviate the economic, social, and minority rights implications of the partition of Upper Silesia, a closely-knit industrial area inhabited by both Poles and Germans of various creeds. Within the framework of the...

Users without a subscription are not able to see the full content. Please, subscribe or login to access all content.